Children in Scotland is the national network organisation for the children's sector in Scotland. It is clear from available evidence that housing, environment and community have a significant impact on children's wellbeing. We also believe that it has much less prominence, for example, in integrated planning process than is desirable. We would like this to be much more effectively addressed. CiS is currently carrying out a participation project for a major housing provider, aimed at involving young people much more effectively in housing issues and ensuring that their perspective are responded to by the organisation. We believe that initiatives like this should be an integral part of housing development and community regeneration strategies and would like to see this reflected in the document.

Commission on Housing and Wellbeing's consultation paper?:
